HISTORY DAY
GEORGIA

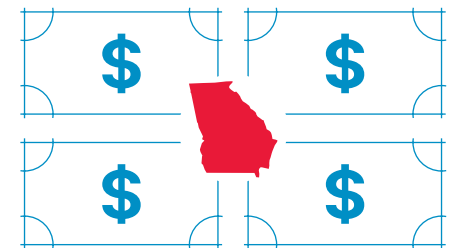

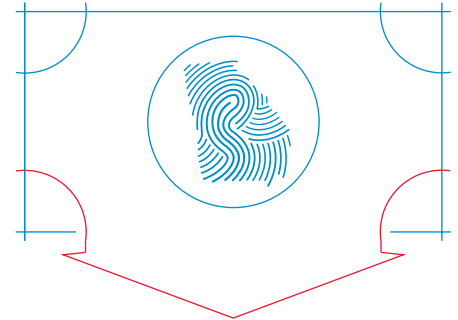

National History Day Georgia

Using primary and secondary resources, middle- and high school students conduct and present original research by creating an exhibit, essay, documentary, performance, or website.

- Mary McCoy, a Columbus middle-school student, created a documentary, Consequences of the Compromise: Keynes and Versailles, which was cited as Outstanding State Entry, Junior Division, at the National History Day national contest. McCoy also won special recognition from the Georgia World War I Centennial Commission at the state contest for National History Day Georgia.
- Student Sophie Earwood of Columbus won a special award from the Georgia World War I Centennial Commission at the state contest for National History Day Georgia. This award recognized her performance about the Treaty of Versailles and Woodrow Wilson's influence.
- Student James Robinson also won a special award from the Georgia World War I Centennial Commission at the state contest for National History Day Georgia. This award recognized his website, "The Bonus Expeditionary Force."
- Regional contests held at Rutland Middle School and at Georgia Southwestern State University
